

Castro Bows, Ready To Remove Red-Supplied Bombers In Cuba

RR Service Into Phila. Is Expanded

The Pennsylvania Railroad today announced that it will operate 49 more commuters' trains between Lower Bucks County and Philadelphia starting Dec. 3, when "Operation Levittown" goes into effect.

They will include three express runs in the morning to the city and two in the late afternoons returning from the city.

The PRR released a full schedule for "Operation Levittown," joint commuter pact which is being financed through funds from the Federal government, Bucks County and Philadelphia.

New fares, which will be approximately one-third lower than the present fares, were not announced. They will be available within a week, a spokesman for "Operation Levittown" said today, and the reduction will be on both multiple-ride and one-ride tickets.

Schedule Set

The schedule shows trains leaving Levittown weekday mornings at 6:24, 7, 7:08, 7:41, 7:44, 8:25, 9:20, 10:12, and 11:17 and in the afternoon, also into the city, at 12:17 p.m., 2:06, 4:07, 5:35, 6:12, 7:22, 8:56 and 10:51.

This is an increase of seven trains per day over the present schedule into the city.

Morning stops at Bristol of the Philadelphia-bound trains are at 6:32, 7:06, 7:15, 7:47, 7:50, 8:30, 9:26, 10:18 and 11:23. Afternoon Philadelphia-bound stops in Bristol are at 12:23 p.m., 2:12, 4:13, 5:53, 6:18, 7:28, 9:02 and 10:57.

Early Bird Express

Of these, the 7 a.m. train out of Levittown, 7:06 from Bristol, will be the Early Bird Express, traveling non-stop past the Philadelphia city line from Bristol.

The 7:41 from Levittown, 7:47 from Bristol, will be called the Mid-County Express. It will stop at Croydon, 7:41, and Cornwells Heights, 7:57, and then go non-stop to 30th St. Station in Philadelphia, skipping the usual North Philadelphia stop in the city.

The third morning express is the Delaware Valley Express, leaving Levittown at 8:25 a.m., Bristol 8:30, and Cornwells Heights, 8:36. It reaches Suburban Station at 9:09 a.m. after stops at North Philadelphia and 30th Street.

Outbound Service

Evening outbound fast service will be provided by the Bucks County and Delaware Valley expresses.

The Bucks County leaves Suburban Station at 5:09 p.m., makes its next stop at Cornwells Heights at 5:39; Croydon, 5:42; Bristol, 5:47 and Levittown 5:53.

The Delaware Valley leaves Suburban Station at 5:16, present leaving time for a similar express. It stops at 30th Street and (Continued on Page 24)

In Middletown

School Named For Dwight Eisenhower

By DAN STUDEBAKER
Courier-Times Staff Writer

Middletown Township School Board last night decided to call the township's fifth elementary school, now under construction, the "Dwight D. Eisenhower Elementary School."

The board selected the name from a list of 57 possibilities suggested by school children and adults in the school district.

Among the suggested names for the school, located on Woodburne Road in the Cobalt Ridge area of Levittown were Charlie Chaplin, Sigmund Freud, Jim Bowie, Jack Paarr, Leon Uris and Isaac Newton.

Narrowed To 3 Names

The board finally narrowed the list to include only the names of Eisenhower, Authress Pearl Buck and Admiral Richard E. Byrd, the famed Antarctic explorer. On the fifth ballot, Eisenhower's name was selected.

The board will write to the former President asking for his permission to name the school after him.

The school is scheduled to open next fall with an enrollment of about 650.

In other action the board nominated and approved Alan Sonnenheim as a school board representative on the township parks and recreation board. Sonnenheim, a banker, lives at 27 Terrace Road, Twin Oaks, Levittown.

Sidney Yates, board solicitor, told members that final settlement had been made on the purchase by the school district of a 40-acre tract on Route 413 near Greca Valley, in the upper section. (Continued on Page 3, Col. 2)

Ike To Await Notification

Brigadier General Robert L. Schutz, aide to former President Eisenhower said today that Eisenhower would await official notification by the Middletown Township School Board before responding to the board's proposal to name its fifth elementary school after him.

The board indicated last night that it would request Eisenhower's permission by letter to name the school in his honor.

Several schools have been named after Eisenhower, the general said, including one in Michigan.

Show Center, Motel Might Locate Here

The Lower Bucks area has been proposed as the site of a permanent building products display center in which will be located a beautiful, modern motel.

According to Roy Murray Gardner, a vice president of Showcase National and a Trevese resident, his company has gotten together with Holiday Inns of America to establish the world's first permanent network of building products and home show centers in 30 major U.S. markets.

The center will include a products display building, a Holiday Inn, an office building, warehousing facilities as well as meeting rooms, restaurant and professional library, Gardner said.

Now Negotiating

Speaking about Lower Bucks, he said, "We are pretty much settled on what we want here. We are now negotiating with owners of properties in the area."

He said his company would erect the display center in an area "exceeding 135 acres." He said he expected the agreement on purchase of the land to be concluded by Feb. of 1963 and construction to begin by mid-winter of 63-64.

Gardner spoke optimistically of the effects the center would have on the lower Bucks area. He said it would bring industries into the area and have a tremendous effect on the economy.

He said a minimum of 10,000 persons a day would visit the permanent exhibits. "All potential buyers in the area," Gardner said.

100 Letters Received

Gardner said 100 exhibitors have already sent letters of commitment to Showcase, and he expects 300 more exhibitors.

The center is expected to house exhibits of all kinds of building products, Gardner said. These would include plumbing supplies, dry wall, large appliances, heating equipment, asbestos products, as well as application ideas and guidance services for public, professions and trades.

Tractor-Trailer Truck Upsets

A tractor-trailer truck overturned this morning on State Road and Totem Road, near Neshaminy Creek in Bensalem Township with the driver of the truck taken to Lower Bucks County Hospital for examination.

The driver of the truck, Gilbert Ross, 51, of 708 S. Third St., Camden, N.J. was taken to the hospital by the Bensalem Rescue Squad where he was being X-rayed.

Bensalem police said, however, that after the accident, Ross walked around the truck to investigate the damage.

Historical Fallsington Zoning OK'd

By AL CHESTER

The Falls Township Board of Supervisors has adopted the controversial historical Fallsington zoning ordinance.

The unanimous decision, coming at last night's supervisors' meeting, apparently makes Falls Township the first second class township in the state to have such zoning.

The ordinance stipulates that all proposals to erect, alter, restore, raze or demolish a structure in (Continued on Page 3, Col. 8)

Dean Of Sportswriters

Tom Juno Funeral To Be Held Friday

Funeral services will be held Friday for Thomas M. Juno, assistant postmaster of Bristol and dean of Lower Bucks County sportswriters, who died yesterday afternoon in Lower Bucks County Hospital.

Mr. Juno, 50, had been ill for the past five weeks. Following a recent operation, he had returned home. Rushed to the hospital yesterday morning, he died at 1:40 p.m.

Sportswriter for the Courier-Times for 35 years, Mr. Juno began covering sports for the paper while still in Bristol High School. He covered all Bristol High athletic events, including the traditional Thanksgiving Day football game between Bristol and Morrisville which he first covered 34 years ago when he was a student manager for the then Bristol Bunnies.

Starting as a correspondent, Mr. Juno was promoted in recent years to a regular member of the Courier-Times sports department. (Continued on Page 3, Col. 2)

U.S. Adopts A Watchful Attitude

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. officials indicated today that a major break is imminent in the Cuban negotiations with Fidel Castro ready to bow to demands that Soviet bombers be removed from his country.

Despite delivery of Castro's letter to United Nations Acting Secretary General Thant, the Kennedy administration adopted a watchful attitude.

"It is too early to say just what this means," Secretary of State Dean Rusk told newsmen as he left by plane for New York. Rusk plans to confer later today with U.S. officials at the United Nations.

Other officials saw the possibility of a major development in the deadlocked crisis later today.

The impression in official quarters here was that definite word was expected from Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev that he would pull the jet bombers out of Cuba. This was likely to come through his negotiator at the United Nations, Vasily Kuznetsov.

Official U.S. response to the Castro letter could come during Kennedy's scheduled news conference at 6 p.m. EST.

Although the Soviets have removed from Cuba 42 medium range missiles, Kennedy has demanded that the IL28 bombers be withdrawn as well.

Before word of Castro's letter reached here, there were hints that the President was pondering a new show of U.S. firmness at the news conference to underscore his bomber removal demands.

The later wait-and-see policy appeared to be prompted in part by the fact that full details on the Castro letter were not immediately available. By mid-morning, U.S. policy makers had only the broadcast version of Castro's views as given by Havana Radio.

President Kennedy postponed a scheduled 10 a.m. EST meeting with the Executive Committee of the National Security Council until 4 p.m. amid indications that Kuznetsov was setting up a New York session with U.S. representatives sometime this afternoon.

Still unanswered is whether the Castro offer contains any conditions, such as insistence that the United States pull out of its naval base at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba. This was one of several points Castro has stated should be met before Communist offensive weapons are removed from the island.

The President and his aides were anxious to learn whether the Castro statement was the hoped-for break in the long negotiations on the IL28's and would indicate that Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev was ready to pledge removal of the planes.

Twp. Teacher Faces Grand Jury, Hearing

JAMES E. FOLEY

By SCOOP LEWIS
Courier-Times Staff Writer

Suspended Bristol Township teacher James E. Foley, held yesterday for the grand jury on charges of tending to corrupt the morals of a 12-year-old boy, now faces a hearing that may mean his dismissal from the township school system.

Foley, 32-year-old teacher at Lafayette Elementary School on Lafayette Drive, was released under $500 bail yesterday after a 90-minute hearing before Justice of the Peace Joseph M. Haines, Edgely.

Haines ordered the fifth grade teacher held for the Bucks County grand jury as a result of charges brought by Mr. and Mrs. Emanuel DiQuattro of 1311 Bath Road, parents of James A. DiQuattro, the boy to whom Foley wrote an allegedly immoral letter.

Public Hearing

Prior to his appearance before the grand jury, Foley must face the Bristol Township School Board in a public hearing to be held Dec. 7 in Benjamin Franklin Junior High School. The hearing, originally set for Nov. 28, was postponed at the request of Foley's counsel, John Leslie Kilcayne. Foley faces charges of (Continued on Page 24)

Mrs. F.D.R. School Name Stirs Protest

The Falls Township School Board's decision to name its new elementary school the Anna Eleanor Roosevelt School touched off some angry comments at last night's board meeting.

Only seven spectators attended the meeting, but five of them were quite vocal in their protests.

William Duff said he was against naming the school after Mrs. Roosevelt and was "willing to make a political issue." When board member Raymond Lipshutz asked, "What do you mean?" Duff replied, "You'll see."

Proposes Other Names

Later Duff claimed the public had no opportunity to voice any objections to the name, that it was decided in a "closed board meeting." He said he was against the name because Mrs. Roosevelt was "controversial, an extreme leftist, a socialist." He proposed as alternate names "Dwight D. Eisenhower" and "General MacArthur."

Another person voicing objections was Ken McLaurin who said "I have no respect for Mrs. Roosevelt. Couldn't we find a replacement for her?"

Mrs. Josephine Capilla thought Mrs. Roosevelt, if she were alive, would disapprove of the way in which the board decided on her name. "You named the school without discussion," she said. "This is one of the things Mrs. Roosevelt would never care for."

Name Will Stand

After listening to the objections, Mrs. Bernice Kessler, school board president, said the name would stand since the board had voted for it unanimously.

In other action, the board appointed Raymond Lipshutz and Anne Massey to the nominating committee of the Falls Township Advisory School Committee.

Commenting on the advisory committee, Mrs. Kessler asked all interested persons who still had not received applications to call the Falls Township office in the Fallsington Elementary School.

ment, although still on a part-time basis.

In addition, during the 35 years, Mr. Juno wrote sports for various newspapers, including the old Philadelphia Record and Ledger, Philadelphia Inquirer, Philadelphia Bulletin and Trenton Times.

A familiar face on the Lower Bucks sporting scene, Mr. Juno was virtually a "walking encyclopedia" of names, places and dates. Past or present, he could recite sports events on the tip of his finger. His forte was his immense knowledge and background of sports, particularly when it came to statistics.

Scorer, Statistician

For years he was official scorer and statistician for numerous softball and basketball leagues in the area.

Some of Mr. Juno's important assignments in recent years included covering the World Series in Pittsburgh and New York. He also traveled with the Bristol Babe Ruth League team to regional tournament play in Virginia.

Prior to entering the hospital last month, Mr. Juno was honored at the annual Bensalem Softball League banquet, being presented with a plaque noting his years of service to the league and to Lower Bucks County sports.

Standing Ovation

Only last Saturday night, Mr. Juno was given a standing ovation at the annual banquet of the Lower Bucks County Softball League. It was the first function of the league he had missed since the loop was formed in 1937.

Assistant postmaster in Bristol since May 2, 1959, Mr. Juno began his postal career over 32 years ago. He started as a sub-carrier on June 1, 1931.

Moving up to a rural carrier, Mr. Juno became a regular carrier on June 16, 1939.

Superintendent of Mails

On Nov. 30, 1946, he transferred from carrier to clerk, working inside the Bristol Post Office. He was appointed superintendent of mails on May 16, 1951, a position he held until being appointed assistant postmaster.

Mr. Juno was a member of the National Association of Postal Supervisors, National Association of Letter Carriers and Bucks County Postmasters Association.

In addition to sports and his postal work, Mr. Juno was an active figure in Bristol Borough civic affairs. A member of the St. Ann's A.A., he had served both as secretary and treasurer of the organization.

He was a member of the Holy Name Society of St. Ann's Church and a member of the recently-formed Benchwarmers Club, a group of Lower Bucks sports enthusiasts.

Lawrence M. Mulligan, Bristol postmaster, described Mr. Juno as a "wonderful fellow, a good friend and a wonderful worker." His expression of the community's loss was echoed throughout the area.

Warren P. Snyder, superintendent of Bristol's Public Schools, said Mr. Juno was "a loyal Bristolian and a loyal Bristol High alumnus. He reflected in his writings things about our school and our community." Snyder attended tion of the township. Settlement price was $92,000, Yates reported.

David S. Keim, board secretary, said today that the board has no immediate plans for construction of a school on the site. He added, however, that the tract was large enough to build a junior high school on it. He did not rule out the possibility that an elementary school, which requires less ground, would be built.

For Farming

In the meantime, the board is willing to rent 35 acres of the land at $10 per acre for farming.

The board also approved exempting businesses which pay federal amusement taxes from paying 30 per cent of their township amusement taxes. The township government had already approved the measure. There is a 10 per cent amusement tax levied from recreation businesses in the township.

Doughnut Shop Burglarized

Burglars broke into a doughnut shop in the Five Points Shopping Center this week, making off with $50 in change, Bristol Township police reported today.

Morton Hartman, 33, of 27 Iris Road, Indian Creek, Levittown, told police his establishment, Do-Nut Town, was burglarized sometime between 9:30 p.m. Sunday and 9 a.m. yesterday.

Patrolman Norman Stoner said the money was in a paper bag in the store.

Indians Kick Chinese Advance

NEW DELHI (UPI)—Indian forces were reported today to have checked the Chinese Communist advance south of Bomdila and Walong at opposite ends of the fighting front in the North East Frontier Agency (NEFA).

A Defense Ministry spokesman said the Indian troops were holding their positions against the Chinese pincers movement as fighting continued in both the Bomdila and Walong sectors.

Professional Touch Seen In Safe Theft

A safecracking at the J. C. Penney Department, Levittown Shopping Center, in which $3,000 in cash and checks were taken, was described today by Tullytown Borough Chief John B. Walterick as having "all the earmarks of a professional job."

Investigation of the theft, which was discovered yesterday morning, is being continued by Tullytown police, with assistance from the Trevose State Police.

Chief Walterick pointed out that two similar jobs of safecracking have taken place in the area recently, one of them at the W. T. Grant Department Store in Trenton.

Soggy Checks Found

The chief said the thieves took approximately $1,800 in cash and $1,200 in checks. He added that $700 in soggy checks were found littered about the floor, which was covered with about two inches of water.

A dollar bill and $144 in change were left in the safe, the chief said.

"They'll probably be disappointed when they learn they left a dollar," the chief quipped.

Locked The Door

The chief said the thieves gained entrance by prying the front door with a crow bar. They then locked the front door, to eliminate any suspicion they were inside.

Walterick theorized the thieves then broke the lock on the freight door in the back of the store, and brought in their burning equipment.

"The car carrying the equipment probably drove off and the driver was instructed to return later," the chief said, again to eliminate any sign of suspicion.

No Windows

"The culprits probably took their time and worked with the light on," the chief said, adding that there are no windows in the room where the safe is located.

"The safe is located in the basement office of the building."

"The thieves burned a seven-by-eight inch hole in the one-ton safe's thick wall - and - an - eighth inch one - and - an - eighth inch one wall, and reached in to take the money. Walterick said that two-thirds of the safe was filled with water, which was used to keep the inside cool.

The thieves knew exactly where to go.

"The job was eased and well-planned," the chief said.

Collections Won't Stop

An official of the Penn Sanitation Co. said today that his firm had not bid on making trash collections in Tullytown during 1963 because it was not aware that bids were to be opened.

However, he said, the firm which holds the present contract, will submit a bid for the next meeting of Council.

Council Secretary Donald Stockdill last night revealed that although the borough advertised for bids for collection, none had been received.

Collections Continues

Philip Nussbaum of Penn Sanitation said that even should the 1962 contract expire, and no new bid has been awarded, Penn Sanitation would continue the collections until the matter is straightened out.

Nussbaum said that most municipalities submit an invitation to bid to a firm holding a present contract when that contract is about to expire.

No such invitation was received from Tullytown, Nussbaum said, and his firm did not notice that the borough was advertising for bids.

Will Submit Bid

However, aware of the situation now, he said it will submit a bid soon.

Trash collection in Tullytown is at municipal expense, under contract to a private firm.

New Courthouse Is In 'Good Condition'

The Bucks County Grand Jury after an inspection of county buildings yesterday reported that the facilities in the plush $7 million courthouse were in "good condition." The report was filed with the county commissioners.

The jury also lauded the Ne-shaminy Manor Home, the Detention Home of the County Prison and the county annex building as being "well managed and well maintained."

The annex, however, the jury said, appeared to be over-crowded and there was an absence of visible fire equipment above the first floor.

Similar Request

Acting on a similar request, this one from the Union Electrical or Porelain Company to borrow or buy target rifles now in storage due to the discontinued rifle program, the board said it was not authorized to lend equipment.

The board said it might reinstate rifle at a later date or might even consider an R.O.T.C. program for the future, therefore it voted the retain to the rifles.

Dr. Charles Muschell, regional superintendent of Pennsbury Schools, reported on the recent evaluation of Pennsbury High School. He said the evaluation went splendidly and "all, told, the board will be very happy to receive the commendable and praiseworthy report."

Tullytown Council Given Eye-Opener On Problems

Tullytown Borough Council at its regular monthly meeting last night discovered that the borough owns no property, has no trash collection contract as yet for 1963, has no building within the borough suitable for a fallout shelter and quite likely has lost its last chance to qualify for a 50 per cent Federal loan with which to extend sewer lines into the older part of the town.

Council does have a feasibility study being made into the sewer extension, it learned, and it remained steadfast in its determination to continue with the study despite attack from three of the seven councilmen.

The study is being made by newly named Borough Engineer, David Stybel, and at present surveys are taking elevations, Stybel said.

$3,000 cost

It will cost the borough $3,000, he said, for the study alone and as much as 10 per cent of the total construction cost of the sewers, estimated in the neighborhood of $200,000, if his firm does the construction.

He made this estimate when Council reviewed its decision to employ his firm for the study. Another engineering firm, William Major Associates of Bristol had offered to make a similar study for three and one-half percent of the total cost according to a letter from Major which was re-read to Council last night.

Major's offer was turned down and Stybel given the nod at a special Council meeting Nov. 7. Last night, shortly after the session opened, Councilman Joseph Napoli sought to have the two varying percentages inserted into the minutes of the special meeting.

Asked For Reason

He had voted against having Stybel make the study, the minutes showed, and he wanted the reason for this vote to show.

Councilman John Thompson also asked to have the minutes show that he had left the special meeting before the study was awarded and thus also did not vote in favor of Stybel.

Council, in a scattershot meeting which jumped from one subject to another, also:

1. Passed a resolution supporting the borough school board's effort to dissolve the Delhaas School Jointure;

2. Accepted the resignation of Police Clerk Jean Goldthorpe, who has returned to college;

3. Decided to review an ordinance increasing the cost of advertising permits and fees for advertising signs within the borough;

4. Chewed over the possibility of fees for vending and entertainment machines in the borough;

Tax Collector John G. Walterick told Council that no such license fees are collected at present.

However, Walterick said, amusement taxes are collected by the school board on the coin-type machines that provide rides for children, such as bucking horses and wagons.

The board, Walterick said, also considers pinball games as amusements and could collect taxes on them although it does not do so at present.

Stybel told Council that three Federal loan plans are available for help in sewer installations. At present only the Levittown sections lying within the borough have sewers.

Plans Explained

Those three, he said, include one under Public Law 560 which covers the design fee only; one under Public Law 660, for 50 per cent of the total cost, and one under an accelerated public works program, for 50 per cent of the cost.

This one, however, he said, has limited funds within each state and it is likely that Pennsylvania's quota will be exhausted before Tullytown can file an application, since a feasibility study is requisite.

The most likely possibility, he said, is under Public Law 560. For this, however, a pumping station must be built on municipally owned ground.

The only municipality owned grounds in Tullytown, he declared, are the lots occupied by the fire company and owned by that company, the school grounds, owned by the Tullytown School Authority, and Borough Hall, at Main St. and Bordentown Road.

Leased Ground

However, Borough Hall is built on property leased from Warner Co. and not owned by Tullytown.

Mayor Nicholas Eberle asked him if he thought the study should continue and Stybel said that he believed it should. The feasibility study, he said, would include possible sites for a pumping station which might be acquired by the borough.

Councilman Edward Hunt at this time offered his objections to the progress of the plans for sewers.

"You don't want these sewers," he told the other councilmen. "I'm ready right now to second a motion that we drop the plans altogether if anyone will make it."

No Motion Made

No one made the motion however.

In other matters, Hunt revealed that he has posted no-parking signs along the Tullytown-Fallsington Road where it marks the edge of the Lakeside section of Levittown and also the borough limits.

A group of seven commercial buildings have been built across the road from the homes, in Falls Township, despite protests from the Tullytown residents.

Hunt's signs can restrict parking only on the Tullytown side of the road, since the opposite side is under the jurisdiction of Falls Township.

To Prepare Ordinance

Solicitor Stanley Rutkowski promised to have an ordinance prepared for the next meeting restricting parking on the Tullytown side of the road. Meanwhile, he said, Hunt can post the road under a provision giving the borough emergency restrictive powers for a period of 90 days.

Borough Secretary Donald Stockdill revealed that the borough received no bids for trash collection in response to an advertisement published the previous week.

The trash collection contract expires at the end of the year. Stockdill was directed to repeat the advertisement.

Other Action

In other action Council voted to withhold payment of a bill for $3,339.60 to Meredith Paving Co. for pavement on Manor, Cheston and Lovett Aves., after Eberle and several councilmen expressed dissatisfaction with the paving.

Eberle, who lives on Cheston Ave., complained that the paving has left a four-inch shoulder in front of the driveway to his garage.

An executive meeting of Council with representatives of Meredith and the borough engineer, scheduled for tomorrow night, will go into the payment matter and possible corrections in the pavement.

Tentative Budget

Councilman John Silvi asked heads of the various council committees to prepare tentative budget requests for 1963 so a new budget can be prepared.

Thompson, civil defense director for the borough, declared that no building conforms with necessary protection for a fallout shelter, according to a study recently made for the Bucks County Civil Defense.

However, he said, the Walt Disney School, the borough's public elementary school, was not included in that study. He has asked that it be considered as a possible shelter.

Thompson also said that a Civil Defense booklet on procedures in the event of a national emergency would be distributed to borough residents within the next few weeks.

Motion Unanimous

The motion to support the school board in seeking to dissolve the Delhaas school jointure was made by Hunt and passed unanimously.

Under Act 561, Hunt said, Tullytown's school taxes would leap from the present 50 mills to a probable 70 mills at a minimum, since reorganization would place Bristol Township and Tullytown in the same union-type district.

Councilman adopted the resolution despite Rutkowski's statement that it carried no validity since school jointures are within the jurisdiction of the school board only and do not come under Borough Council's powers.

Aid Program Of Proposed High School

A Ford Foundation grant may be in the offing to aid the Pennsbury School system develop the educational program of the proposed new high school, which is slated for construction starting June 1, 1964.

Dr. Charles Muschell, regional superintendent of the Pennsbury schools, reporting last night at the joint school board meeting, said such a grant is possible but would not be forthcoming till the next school year. He said a prospectus concerning the grant is now being prepared by the county office of education and would be made available to the board shortly.

Agreement With Architect

In other action last night concerning the new high school, the board voted to enter into a formal agreement with the architect, Ronald E. Vaughn, for planning the new building.

The board's proposed planning and construction schedule for the school drew some comments from school board secretary James Smith because it didn't allow for a board review of the plans.

"The plans awarding the contract for the Fallsington Elementary School were sent out without the board's approval," he said. "I don't want this to happen in this case."

The board decided that the plans ought to be made available to the board before construction bids are authorized. February 1964 was the approximate date set for the review.

Historical

The newly zoned area, principally Meeting House Square, would have to be approved by a five-man Board of Historical Review.

Meanwhile Woodward C. Carter, whose proposed house at 8 Meeting House Square, Fallsington, was in the center of the historic zoning storm, was granted permission last night by the zoning board of adjustment to build on his property.

Carter was initially refused the right to construct because his proposed structure exceeded in volume one which had been razed, and did not have the required front yard set-back.

When Carter appealed this decision to the zoning board, the township planning commission asked the board to refuse his petition. The commission said it felt Carter's proposed house was not in keeping with the historical area.

The board then took Carter's appeal "under advisement" to give Carter time to iron out his differences with the planning commission and Historic Fallsington, Inc., both of which were prime movers of historic zoning.

Although their differences have apparently not yet been settled, the zoning board moved itself out of the controversy with its decision last night.

The next step for Carter, apparently, now that historic zoning is a reality, is to submit his plans for his structure to the Board of Historical Review.

When one of the spectators voiced concern about possible litigation, Milton Berkes, chairman of the supervisors, said, "We in Falls Township have never been afraid of pioneering. If there is litigation, it's a chance we must take."

Berkes said members of the board would be named at the supervisors' Dec. 4 meeting.

In other action last night, the board passed a resolution asking the state Civil Service Commission to be prepared to conduct examinations in Falls Township should the township appoint a full time, paid Civil Defense director.

Berkes said a paid Civil Defense director and all personnel under him would be regulated by Civil Service and would have to take the examinations.
